By REV. PETER AHN

I enjoyed four years of ministry at the Albany United Methodist Church and retired June 19 at the 134th session of the California-Nevada annual conference of the United Methodist Church in San Jose. I have one more Sunday to serve at Albany, today, June 27, before I leave this community.

It is our plan to move to Mountain View to settle down near our twin sons. Then we shall travel around the world early this fall. I will resume my biblical research work for the Lockman Foundation in Orange County when I return. I shall do research at home and commute to southern California by air.

Reflecting on the past, I am glad I was called early in this ministry of God from which I am now retiring. I felt God's saving grace was sufficient to carry me through these years. I

High costs force 1000 Oaks Hardware to close

the end of a 32-year Solano business story

By ROBERT ALEXANDER

THOUSAND OAKS — Bedeviled by skyrocketing taxes, Thousand Oaks Hardware will close its doors by the end of the month, ending 32 years of service to the community.

Owner Chuck Fehr said the business on upper Solano has never recovered from a massive rate increase in 1980, when its rent was tripled.

The building was bought in January by Smith & Orr, a local-based development company, which plans to say that he had discussed with the new owners of renting 4,000 of the 8,000 square feet that were available.

He said, was that he would have to pay a rent of $6,000 a month for that space ($1.50 per square foot). The business currently pays $6,000 a month for 8,000 square feet, so the proposed change in rent would effectively double the rent.

"So many people have been in here to express their outrage at our leaving," he went on. "I just didn't realize how many friends we had."

Smith & Orr want to return the 60-year-old building — for which they paid more than $900,000 — to an earlier state of elegance.

"We plan to take off the front and expose the brick facade behind it," Smith explained. "We'll also take out the business has been at its present location for 18 years, having moved there from a smaller storefront on Solano Avenue. Besides rent, the store must pay taxes, insurance and for maintenance and upkeep.

Developer Jeff Smith denied raising the hardware store's rent.

"They told us that they wanted to leave even before we gave them any rent information," he said.

"When we offered them half the space, they agreed that they didn't need all the room," he said. "They have been good tenants and we wanted to keep them."

He said that in a smaller space, the business would need less merchandise and fewer employees, as well as pay a lower business tax.

Fehr responded that since taxes have gone up each time the building was sold, any tax reduction was likely to be quite small.

"The hardware business is service-oriented, and you need an adequate staff," he continued. "Customers cannot mix their own paint or make their own keys or figure out their plumbing without assistance." "We've probably employed several hundred students while we've been in business here. This is the end of an era," Fehr said.

Budget axes fall again

City awaits word from capital

By STEPHEN BUEL

ALBANY — As the City Council continued to squeeze savings from next year's tight-money budget, all eyes last week were on Sacramento for a decision by the state legislature on the amount of state "bail-out" money forthcoming to cities.

The council had trimmed only $646 from the budget as of Friday. A deficit of $186,000 is anticipated, so much of the serious talk about budget reductions and revenue generating measures was still to come. Administrative Officer William Haden said he hoped the council's first time through the budget would have an educational effect on the city so it would be ready to deal with the real budget chopping.

Just how much the city needs to cut depends upon what happens in Sacramento. The current state proposal would give Albany all the bail-out money it received last year, but would take back $146,200 in state cigarette and motor vehicle taxes. The council is hoping for passage of a League of California Cities-backed amendment to the budget guaranteeing that no city would lose more in cigarette and motor vehicle taxes than it would gain in bail-out money.

Even if the city was to receive all of the money it got last year, it still would face the choice of raising taxes or making further cuts. The council has already budgeted for a November election to raise the entrance tax at Golden Gate Fields.

And even with increased taxes at the track and the ambulance fee which was tentatively approved, the city may well have to make further reductions.

RUSD budget: $5 million cut

By BARBARA ERICKSON

High school athletics and the six-period day for secondary students, both threatened by the administration's proposed $63 million budget, won partial reprieves from the Richmond Unified School Board in a late-night, full-house session.

A motion by board member Frank Calton Wednesday restored $125,000 of the present $170,000 funding for interscholastic sports.

It also gave back the six-period day to high school freshmen and sophomores at a cost of $600,000. Cutting one period from all secondary schools would have saved the district $1.6 million.

Junior high students as well as juniors and seniors will be left with five periods, one less than the program for the past year. The board gave the extra period to ninth- and 10th-grade students because they have an additional physical education requirement.

The motion, which passed unanimously, also restored $75,000 to high school maintenance.

As a trade-off, the board dipped into the budget's undistributed reserve, eliminated high school newspapers, the work experience program, elementary librarians (although teacher representatives say this is illegal), elementary school clerks, and part of the funding for secondary student and site supervisors.

The tentative budget also wipes out

RUSD cuts $5 million

the elementary music program and prep period, opportunity classes for students with attendance and behavior problems, counselor aides, elementary school vice principals, and busing. It reduces funding for gardeners and cuts one position from the security department.

The board cut $5 million from this year's operation and left the district with a balanced budget to file with the county Office of Education by the July 1 deadline. The final budget is due in September and by then the district will have more exact figures from the state.

A crowd of more than 250 students, parents, teachers and residents turned out for the early deliberations of the budget session. Dozens of students, many of them wearing athletic jerseys, stood and applauded when speakers finished making their pitch for retaining the sports program.

The six-period day, elementary music, and athletics drew most of the attention from the audience. Some said parents would put their children in private schools in the face of these losses.

Parent Wendy Bergman said that even to consider cutting the school day shows a "loss of direction and a lack of leadership," and parent Wes Jensen, lamenting the loss of elementary music, said he envisioned a "musicless society."

Several speakers called for mobilizing school districts to lobby for more money from the state, and some said the board would have more money to spend now if it had closed schools.

School Superintendent Richard Lovette opened the budget deliberations with a series of grim observations on the state of school finance. If the deflator mechanism is triggered in the state budget for next year, he said, it would cost the district a minimum of $1.5 million.

"The cuts practically desecrate the academic program of the Richmond Unified School District," he said, "and the board has very little power to do anything about it" because the state holds the purse strings.

The board also adopted tentative budgets for the cafeteria, child care, and adult education. These funds, as well as special project money, are separate from the general fund.

Hillside Run set in E.C.

EL CERRITO — El Cerrito's 13th annual Hillside Run, a four-mile cross country run through the city, will be held on Saturday, August 7, at 10:30 a.m.

Sponsored by the El Cerrito Parks and Recreation, the event will consist of a run followed by a barbecue and awards ceremony. Cost is $5 for adults and $3.50 for school age children. Price includes the barbecue.

Applications are now available at the El Cerrito Community Center, 7007 Moeser Lane. Sign-ups for the event will be taken up to August 3.

For further information regarding the run, call Karen Emmens at 525-6748.

Administrative Officer Haden said the taxpayers of Albany are now subsidizing the police communications of Kensington for about $6,000 a year. He said a remedy to this problem needs to be worked out.

A variety of suggestions have been made for raising new revenue. The proposals have included making homeowners responsible for maintaining the sidewalks in front of their

Albany squeezes budget and awaits state help

"Very frankly," said administrative officer Haden, "your real reductions are going to be in personnel."

When Haden was asked if the city's employees had been informed of the impending cuts, he chuckled and said, "They know very well the destruction that's going on in your minds."

But how those employees respond to the talk of layoffs is yet another question though. Several speakers have suggested employees should be asked to accept voluntary wage concessions, so the city would not have to lay off any employees. Another proposal would require employees to pay for a quarter of their health and dental insurance, for which the city now pays.

City employees, however, particularly in the police and fire departments, are said to oppose wage concessions of any kind.

With occurrences in Sacramento overshadowing the local budget debate, the council has spent far more time than it had planned discussing certain departmental budgets. And of all the budgets considered so far, none was more emotional than the discussion between Police Chief James Simmons and the public on the police budget. Except for several thousand dollars of savings which were proposed by Simmons, the Police Department's budget request was largely unmodified.

Resident William Meyers, a vocal advocate of cost-cutting throughout the budget, criticized the Police Department's request for two additional police vehicles. He asked why the city needs nine police vehicles when there are never more than 5 officers on the streets at any one time.

The city has five marked police cars, two cars for plain clothed officers and two for undercover work. Chief Simmons said the two undercover cars may not legally be used by uniformed officers. Simmons had requested a tenth vehicle in his original budget.

The council did not pursue Meyer's questioning, but rather, spent lots of time on several relatively small expenditures like a small office safe at $300 and two portable police radios at $800 each.

Administrative Officer Haden said the taxpayers of Albany are now subsidizing the police communications of Kensington for about $6,000 a year. He said a remedy to this problem needs to be worked out.

A variety of suggestions have been made for raising new revenue. The proposals have included making homeowners responsible for maintaining the sidewalks in front of their homes, installing parking meters, charging for the removal of trash and skunks, increasing taxi rates and perhaps the Parks & Recreation Works departments.

The council did trim its budget for the city's subsidy to the school. Pre-school preschool Sextro said the loss of $10,000 will force the school to raise about $70 a month, and that will be difficult for parents to afford.

Council member Angeline said it is time to consider some changes in the city's senior garage sale because it too costly to the city and the city could use the money. Haden said the city $4,150 a year, and the city just renewed senior garage sales, waiting a year before doing the program.

Another possible tax increase could be in street lighting, which apparently makes up 20% of the total public works budget. Residents have suggested what could do without all of the operators on San Pablo Avenue, a special assessment district for merchants for the lighting other painful separation.

Paul, through his life experiences, understood the personal simpler form of the social isolation in his day. However, he can answer to the problem — the love of Jesus Christ and friend. There is no way ever separate us from him.

When I leave my address, my hope is that people of the love of Jesus Christ will be their problems.

This feeling of separation, isolation and rejection is destroying many modern men and women as persons and creating many problems for contemporary society: loss of loved ones, a broken marriage, grown children who ignore parents, health problems that sometimes force people to change careers or retire, and all of the the ceiling; there are skylights there in a 40-foot high ceiling. All the walls are old brick."

Smith said that the space will be divided into three or four parts, and that he expects one of the tenants will be a hardware store. "What we do will depend on the demands of the tenants," he said.

The spaces will be leased for "market rent," which he described as being in the area of $1.50 to $2 per square foot.

"We need to know our total construction costs before we set a rate," he said.

His partner Larry Orr expressed optimism on the future growth of Solano Avenue.

"Everyone who knows about real estate says the most important thing is location, location, location," Orr said. "Upper Solano gets a tremendous amount of foot traffic. The only thing it doesn't have is a church, which makes for a stable neighborhood."

Joe Pena, president of the Solano Avenue Association, a local business and merchants group, expressed his concern at the loss of Thousand Oaks Hardware.

Artist's rendition of building after renovation.

"This is one of the biggest, long-established businesses on the avenue, and it has served the community well," he said. "I'm concerned about the loss of empty stores on Solano Avenue."

But new owner Smith isn't worried about stores, for he believes the street is in a state of transition.

"What's happening on Solano Avenue is opened on College Avenue and on Piedmont. We come in," he said. "It's only a matter of time until street blooms."

National Instruction Day will be Sunday, June 27, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Memorial Park. Bring tennis shoes and a racket.

The children's crusade to stop nuclear war

An Albany family is arrested at Livermore

By PENELOPE KRAMER

Last Sunday, Nicki Hansen was dreading being thrown in jail for blocking traffic to the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. But more than that, Hansen, an Albany resident, was for her 10-year-old daughter Cori, who also had to be arrested.

Cori planned to join the next day's blockade with 50 members of a children's anti-nuclear group. "I don't know how (police) will treat the children," she said. "That's my biggest fear."

I guess I'm afraid of having somebody else so much control—somebody who may be used to dealing with people and not know how to deal with this."

She did not have to fear that Cori would actually go to Law enforcement officials had assured parents that children would be picked up, taken to juvenile hall in La Canada, and released.

Hansen, 31, a resident of Albany Village who had just received her master's degree in architecture from UC Berkeley the day before, has been working for nuclear disarmament for three years. Her trial for protesting at the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant near San Luis Obispo underway.

She had joined the more than 500 protesters who had gone to Berkeley's Provo Park on a cold, grey afternoon for a small pre-demonstration planning session.

Hansen said Cori had been having nuclear nightmares at least three years.

"She wakes up crying and really scared" Hansen said. "Let her talk it out. I don't know what to say to her—either."

Cori said she had been doing anti-nuclear work with her mother, and had decided to be arrested because she wanted to grow up. I wanted to have a future and I wanted my kids to have a future."

Traffic blockades intended to keep workers out of the Livermore Laboratories have been held every since February to protest new weapons development. The lab, operated by the University of California, is birthplace of the neutron bomb (which kills people and buildings intact). It is one of the two nuclear weapons research laboratories in the country.

Cori Hansen

The next day, in the cold and misty dawn, the group of children gathered outside the lab.

Demonstrators were sent in to be arrested in "waves" as they were needed to block traffic. When the children's wave was sent to the lab's West gate at 9 a.m., small groups of them sat down in rows.

As one row would sit down, a row of California Highway Patrol officers in riot helmets would march up to them, stop, and announce through a bullhorn that they were violating section 647c of the penal code, (obstructing a roadway).

Then, as supporters on the sidelines cheered and television cameras followed the action, the officers dragged or walked the children to a waiting bus, and tied their hands behind their backs with a yellow plastic rope.

"The hard part was the fright when we were sitting down," Amy said.

The young demonstrators gave mixed reports of how they were treated.

Many complained that their handcuffs were so tight they stopped circulation, and said that they were kept on the bus, hands tied behind them, for a total of six hours with no bathroom breaks or food. For 48 nervous children who had been up since 3 a.m., this was a hardship. Only a few were able to convince guards that they were in "dire need" and should be allowed to go to the restroom.

Children were also indignant when a guard grabbed one of their number, who was kneeling on a bus seat, by the neck, spun her around and threw her back into her seat. Several children noted his name and badge number.

But some guards would loosen ropes, and after the children reached Juvenile Hall, they were offered food and given a chance to go outside.

Bomse said the children were "very creative. We figured out how to give each other backrubs, open the windows and give each other the peace sign with the ropes on."

At Juvenile Hall, the children got a taste of a different kind of discipline.

By late afternoon, the children, who had never been formally booked or charged, were released to their parents or a friend. They are already planning another protest, and next time police say they may well spend time in Juvenile Hall.

Meantime, Cori's mother was arrested and sent to Camp Parks (a former storage site for radioactive materials near Santa Rita prison) with approximately 1,300 other demonstrators. Hansen, who had pled "not guilty by reason of necessity" and gone to trial after her Diablo Canyon arrest, pled no contest and was released three days later.

During the arrest, Cori said, "I was just pretty scared, because it was my first time."

Asked if she would do it again, Cori said "if I had to, yes."

Even if she went to jail next time?

"Yes," she said firmly. "I don't want to grow up in a nuclear world."

Jacoby on bridge

mistake?" we asked.

"Yes, I did," he replied, "I should not have redoubled six clubs. Without that redouble, West would surely have opened a heart as his partner had asked him to do. After my redouble, West got off to the deuce of trumps lead. Then West got in with the spade ace in order to lead a second trump. That left me with just 11 winners. Two spades, a diamond and eight trump tricks. I had to choose between a diamond finesse or an attempt to drop the diamond king."

"I tried the finesse that was a 50 percent chance. It lost. Without my redouble, the defense would only get in one trump lead against me and I would wrap up the slam on a cross ruff."

A lot of people would criticize the unlucky expert for taking that diamond finesse, but he was correct there. The finesse was a 50 percent chance. The play to drop the king has to be less than 50 percent.

The reason is that the odds are better than even to find the king with the man who has the longer holding in the suit.

If your birthday is today, June 27: This coming year you can look for many favors to begin to occur. Much of what happens will come from events or circumstances over which you'll have little control.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

There to your charitable impulses today when you others who need your help. Try to be the type of person who doesn't put strings on your aid.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Don't let it be said of you that you are a good person only as long as you're going your way. Should the turn, take your lumps with grace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Situations where you don't take yourself or what's being too seriously, you come on like a champ. Upfront upright sends you back to the bush

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

You can accomplish your purposes today by being successful and diplomatic. Push too hard and the ones you aren't to be fruitful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

It's not pride or stubbornness stand in your way if others wanted to be helpful. You know how you feel if you wanted to assist them and they'd accept you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

Some in your group, in order to suit his own purposes today, may try to rearrange things in a manner which could unfavorably affect everyone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Prepared to be supportive today, but at a point. Use your good judgment in letting much to ask of others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

You are socializing with persons today who happen to be in a work-related field, keep things on a basic. Don't bring business into the picture.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Family and community obligations above your frivolous activities. Unless you attend to these first, you could cause problems for yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Associations with your mate can be resolved if you are not too insistent upon getting in the lead. Parting shots produce problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

Require assistance to get the things you want. Be prepared to divvy up the rewards with those who help you make the acquisitions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Against tendencies today to be too demanding and possessive of those you love. You may feel for their good, but they won't.

Children may be placed in an emergency during the
